Bound in is STERNHOLD AND HOPKINS: PSALMS IN METRE, John Baskerville: Birmingham, 1762.

13 BURTON (William) THE DESCRIPTION OF LEICESTERSHIRE: containing Matters of Antiquity, History, Armoury, and Genealogy. Folio. Folding map and two heraldic plates. Old calf. £3 0 0
Printed and Sold by W. Whittington: Lynn [etc.] 1777

 Whittingham of Lynn was in possession of several of Baskerville's founts which are used in this book. Baskerville's "No. 8" ornament is frequently employed. Straus and Dent were evidently unaware of Whittingham's use of Baskerville type, for no mention of him is made in their Memoir.

This is the second edition of Burton's Description of Leicestershire, the first having appeared in 1622. Lowndes (with collation) 330 omits to mention leaf Gggg1: "The Names and Arms of those Knights of the Garter who were of the County of Leicester."

16 CONGREVE (William) WORKS, consisting of his plays and poems [and his essay on humour in comedy]. 3 vol., portrait by T[homas] Chambers after Sir G[odfrey] Kneller, Bart., and 5 plates by C[harles] Grignion after F[rancis] Hayman, all of vol. I, slightly repaired in margin, a few leaves stained as usual, contemporary calf, gilt backs, red labels, with the bookplates of Cranstoun of Corehouse, and T. W. Dewar. £27 10 0

John Baskerville: Birmingham, for J. and R. Tonson: London 1761

 The fact that this copy is stained in places must not be considered as a defect, as this is the characteristic of most copies (Lowndes 510; Straus and Dent, p. 35). The second plate of Vol. I., the first two of Vol. II., and the plate in Vol. III. are misbound. For Johnson's opinion of Congreve see Baker: Biographia dramatice, I. 143-144.

John Baskerville: Birmingham 1762

 COLLATION: A₃ B—Cc6=[6]+300 pp. (No frontispiece.)

AN EXTRAORDINARY COPY, probably made up of revised proof sheets (Straus and Dent 57 and 58). It does not appear to have been pressed with hot irons (as was Baskerville's practice). The book is made up of various kinds of paper and the wire marks run both horizontally and vertically. The most peculiar feature is the fact that three lines of the title are printed in red; this is evidently an experiment, as, so far as we are aware, Baskerville did not use a second colour in any of his books. In view of these peculiarities the absence of the frontispiece cannot be considered as an imperfection.

22 HORATIUS FLACCUS (Quintus) [OPERA]. 4to, [2] + 344 pp., 5 plates, consisting of frontispiece by B[enôit] L[ouis] Henriques, and 4 plates, after Henri Gravelot, by Voy, Lainé, Leveau and C. Le Vaisseur, contemporary crimson straight grain morocco, gold 2 line borders on sides, gilt edges and inside of boards, g.e., with the bookplate of Wilmot, Viscount Lisburne. £40 0 0

John Baskerville: Birmingham 1770

 As is frequently the case with Baskerville's books, the printer has experimented with the ornaments while the work was going through the press. The variations are to be found in the four half-titles (a fact not noted by Messrs. Straus and Dent, p. 80, No. 86), which occur (a) before the general title, (b) before the Epodes, (c) before the satires, (d) before the epistles. Above and below the letterpress of each of these half-titles are ornamental bands, of which four varieties are found, and these vary for the respective half-titles in different copies. In order to define precisely the two copies here offered we give a facsimile and description of each of these bands:

- (A) 135 mm. star at both ends, 33 ornaments.
- (B) 135 „ oval at left, star at right, 34 ornaments.
- (C) 137 „ oval at left, star at right, 36 ornaments.
- (D) 133 „ star at both ends, 35 ornaments.

The present copy may be briefly described as (a) = DD; (b) = CC; (c) = CC; (d) = CC.

The only Baskerville classic with plates, which only occur in some copies. The text type is Straus and Dent's type 6 (plate IX.), which they denominate double pica Roman.

23 HORATIUS FLACCUS (Quintus) [OPERA]. 4to, 1 plate (frontispiece) only, contemporary blue morocco, gold borders on sides, back gilt tooled, gilt edges and inside of boards, g.e. With the bookplate of Charles James Packe. £25 0 0

John Baskerville: Birmingham 1770

 See not to preceding item. The varieties in this copy may be briefly indicated as: (a) = AB; (b) = CC; (c) = DD; (d) = CC.

Text in Latin and English.

William Hunter's greatest work, the materials for which he collected with unremitting care during a period of twenty years. In his preface Hunter acknowledges his indebtedness in most of the dissections to the assistance of his brother John. The plates and descriptions attain a very high degree of accuracy and lucidity. This book may be considered the basis of our present knowledge of the functions of the ovary and uterus. It is from him that we get the term "decidua" and the distinction between "decidua vera" and "decidua reflexa" ("decidua Hunteri"). Consult Valentin's Handbüch der Entwicklungsgeschichte.

28 JENNINGS (David, D.D.) AN INTRODUCTION TO THE KNOWLEDGE OF MEDALS. Sm. 8vo, a few manuscript corrections, original calf. £4 0 0

John Baskerville, of T. Field and J. Payne: London 1764

 FIRST EDITION. A2 B—H4 12. Straus and Dent 68. The book contains several passages in Hebrew character. There are two issues of this edition, one having the imprint: "Printed by John Baskerville, and sold by J. Payne, at the Feathers in Pater-Noster-Row; and S. Gardner, in Gracechurch-street, M.D.CCLXIV"; the other as in this copy.

These lines are in general smooth - & y^r language tolerably genteel - Some new sentiments part of w^{ch} are beautiful, and others ^{with criticism & affectation} ~~some~~. The subject rather unhappy, as it was hardly capable of unity - The chief take, tedious & inconducive to a very great degree - The transitory marked & forced - y^r Poets art being always seen -
 The whole has too little reference to y^r Poem, & is ^{upon I think} ~~certainly~~ one of y^r mediocrities -

 CONTENTS: Publii Virgilii Maronis Bucolica, Georgica et Aeneis, 1757. (Straus and Dent, No. 11, and pp. 28-29.) Facsimile of title: S. & D. plt. IV. "The Virgil of 1757 may with justice be called one of the most brilliant productions of Birmingham. It was the first of that series of books, which in the words of Macaulay, 'went forth to astonish all the libraries of Europe.' Every part of the volume seems to be in harmony with every other part. There is no disproportion, nothing of that 'hesitation' which had been, and still was, so prominent a feature in other books of the time. It is a landmark in the history of typography. Baskerville's first book, indeed, might well belong to a later period; but those who appreciated were the few, and they may well have realised that the Birmingham artist had come before his time." This copy has the following "points": twenty-four additional subscribers, catchword, sig b. "William," p. 224 printed "424"; p. 143 correct, catchword "Ad," p. 144 begins "Evado" (line omitted); p. 316 correct; p. 342, AENEIDOS LIBER DECIMUS, p. 372, AENEIDOS LIBER UNDECIMUS. D. 75 GRAY ([Thomas]) POEMS. Sm. 4to, green wrapper, printed label on back, UNCUT and UNOPENED. £15 0 0

[Giovambattista] Bodoni: Parma 1793

 Brooks 501. De Lama II. 86. The above contains a leaf which appears to have been cancelled in nearly all copies, which occurs at the end and bears the single word notes, being the fly-title to a commentary which was not printed. The relation between the so-called quarto and small quarto editions (really issues) of 1793 is very curious. Prior to p. 41 copies in large quarto are merely a large paper issue, with one small variation (i.e. in the small paper issue p. 40 is headed "Advertisement"; in the large paper issue the heading is omitted). With regard to the rest of the book. pp. 41-60 and pp. 85-93 are entirely reset, but the remainder are from the same setting as the other issue.

76 GRAY ([Thomas]) POEMS. Sm. 4to, contemporary salmon pink boards, with printed paper label, UNCUT. £8 0 0 Ibid. 1793

 The same edition and issue, but without the extra leaf at end.

Edited by the author's son, John Trevor. The Lathmon is a translation of a portion of Macpherson's Ossian, with the English text opposite. The title vignette is a medallion portrait of the author.

 Segno Bodoni un' altra linea di luce alla sua gloria stampando in—4°. Gli amori di Dafni e Cloe, tradotti da Annibal Caro, poscia il testo Greco di Longo Sofista in separato volume. . . . Rispetto poi al Longo Greco, la dedicatoria dichiara questa venustissima edizione essere un nuovo pegno dell' affettuosa sua riverenza al Cavalier d'Azara; e la prefazione ci fa piena fede che l'animo suo riconoscente e tuttor amareggiato dalla perdita del P. Paciaudi abbisognava di offrire alla venerata sua memoria un solenne e pubblico tributo di gratitudine e di sua singolarissima stima; il che fece deplorando la morte recente d'un tanto incomparabile amico, e premettendo al testo quel dotto Proloquium de libris eroticis antiquorum, che tra le carte da esso lasciategli per legato in dono aveva fortunatamente rinvenuto, e giudicava dover aggiungere un qualche maggior lustro a quella edizione." *. The FIRST ISSUE of the FIRST EDITION. Not in De Lama. In this issue the text is printed on quarto paper, and the numerals of plates vii. to xvii. are incorrectly engraved. These errors are here corrected with a pen or by erasure.

The twenty-one plates are in duplicate, one of each being in outline, the other in stipple. The first seventeen plates are by the author; of the four remaining, two are by Giovanni Battista Covoli, and two by the editor, who also wrote the accompanying text, which is based on the notes of his two predecessors. The Encyclopaedia Britannica speaks highly of Santorini: "His anatomical observations, which relate to the muscles of the face, the brain, and several of the nerves, the ducts of the lachrymal gland, the nose and its cavities, the larynx, the viscera of the chest and belly, the organs of generation in the two sexes, furnish beautiful models of essays, distinguished for perspicuity, precision and novelty, above anything which had then appeared. These observations, indeed, which bear the impress of accurate observation and clear conception, may be safely compared with any anatomical writings which have appeared since. Those on the brain are particularly interesting."

 "[He] printed the Aminta in 4to, and dedicated it to her [the Marchioness Anna Malaspina della Bastia], with a beautiful poem in blank verse by the celebrated Vincenzo Monti, saying: 'Cosa non v'essere che ai misteri d'Amor più si convenisse d'amoroso volume, e nun dono el genio Malaspino poteroi essere più grato che il canto d'Elicona.' The fact that the Abate Pierantonio Serassi edited the volume, and added a learned essay [on the history and bibliography of the poem] enhances its value." (Lama: Vita di Bodoni, I., p. 36.) "Renouard says: 'One of the most beautiful of Bodoni's editions.' Fifty copies were printed in carta doppia duc., and the same number on carta d'Annonay" (Op. cit. II., p. 54). "The Aminta is a poem full of roguish innocence; it is an embodiment of youthful longing, an intoxication of desire, a dreamland of the senses, where naive love sports coyly in the covert among the fresh young leaves of spring, and rivals the roses in blushing, and peeps and hides again. The Aminta is possessed by that supreme art that conceals itself behind a veil of alluring simplicity. . . . The poem was full of half hints and veiled allusions to incidents of court life." (W. Boulting: Tasso and his times, pp. 142-143.) Pp. 133-142: "Amore fuggitivo di Torquato Tasso, assai migliorato col roscontro delle prime e più corrette edizioni."

 FIRST EDITION WITH BEWICK'S NUMEROUS CUTS. VERY IMPORTANT EDITION. Hugo's Bewick, 94, "The first edition of this beautiful book was printed in the above year [1796]. . . This work contains the best specimens of Bewick's abilities as a designer; all the cuts were drawn by him, except one." Dict. Nat. Biog., XVIII., 665: "Somerville's fame rests chiefly on 'The Chase,' a poem of four books in blank verse . . . the finest [edition] being that of 1796, with illustrations by the brothers Bewick, of whose art it exhibits some of the best examples." A writer in the Gentleman's Mag., soon after Bewick's death, says, "The works of this young artist will be held in estimation; and the engravings to 'Somerville's Chase' will be a monument of Fame of more celebrity than marble can bestow." The types which are used in this book are copied from those of BASKERVILLE, by William Martin, a brother of Baskerville's foreman, who cut a fount especially for William Bulmer, at the "Shakespeare Press"; see Straus & Dent's Memoir of John Baskerville, p. 21. 174 [GARRICK (David)] TO MR. GRAY ON HIS ODES. Sm. 4to (87/8 by 65/8 in.), single sheet, printed on both sides. £15 10 0
[Strawberry Hill Press: Twickenham after August 8, 1757]

 Austin Dobson, p. 298, says: "Only six copies are said to have been printed; but it is not improbable that there were more." He assigns this leaf to the year 1757; it must therefore have been published very soon after the Odes, which was the first production of the Strawberry Hill Press.

176 HENTZNER (Paul) A JOURNEY INTO ENGLAND IN THE YEAR 1598 [The Latin text and a translation by Richard Bentley. With an introduction by Horace Walpole.] 12mo, vignette on title, contemporary calf, gilt, VERY FINE COPY, with the armorial spade shield bookplate of C. Alderson. £8 10 0
[Horace Walpole]: Strawberry Hill [October] 1757

 Dobson 298. Franks 286. "Gray's Odes were succeeded by Hentzner's Travels, or to speak more accurately, by that portion of Hentzner's Travels which refer to England. In England Hentzner was little known, and the 220 copies which Walpole printed in October, 1757, were prefixed by an advertisement from his pen and a dedication to the Society of Antiquaries, of which he was a member. . . . In October, 1757, was finished at my press an edition of Hentznerus, translated by Mr. Bentley." Walpole also states in a letter to John Chute, dated July 12, 1757, that this book was intended to be the first production of the press, but that it was postponed in favour of Gray's Odes. Paul Hentzner was a German lawyer, who accompanied a young Silesian nobleman on a European tour. After his return to Germany he published a description of what he had seen. The English portion is one of the chief authorities for the social life of Shakespeare's period.

Printed by Thomas Kirgate: Strawberry Hill, 1781

 FIRST EDITION. The D.N.B. says of the author: "His mother's means were not sufficiently large to maintain him at college without assistance, and on the strength of his brilliant Harrow reputation he was in 1765 appointed private tutor to Lord Althorp. . . This connection proved of the greatest advantage to Jones."

Only 250 copies were printed.

Edwards Binding with Bill and Interesting Letter.

179 STRAWBERRY HILL PRESS. LUCANUS (M. Annaeus) PHARSALIA. 4to (11 1/2 by 9 1/8 inches), vignette on title-page by Grignon. In a vellum binding by Edwards, of Halifax. The sides are ornamented with blue and gold borders, enclosing a palm leaf border. Within this, on the upper cover, are the Arms of the original owner, Richard Bull, emblazoned in gold and colours, the design being after Bartolozzi, who used it on the exlibris of Sir Foster Cunliffe, Bart. On the lower cover, within the borders mentioned above, is an oval classical scene. The back is decorated with classical emblems divided by blue and gold bands; at the foot is a view of Strawberry Hill. The fore-edge painting, which is of particular delicacy, representing the house and grounds of Strawberry Hill, and is supported by small scenes of Roman soldiers. The end and fly-leaves are of blue silk, and inside the upper cover is the Chippendale bookplate of Richard Bull. Gilt edges of leaves.

£265 0 0 Strawberry Hill Press 1760

 This volume must be among the finest specimens of Edwards' work. It is made particularly interesting by the insertion of a long autograph letter, signed, from Edwards to Mr. Bull, and the binder's bill (which amounted to £4 4s.) for the book.

The letter (3 pp., 4to) is dated July 24, 1784, and commences: "We had the Honor to receive your Letter of the 18th ult. and acknowledge ourselves under the greatest Obligations, not only for your favourable Opinion of the binding of the Books, but also for the remarks you condescend to make, and wch we hope to improve by."

"As to the drawing being properly fix'd, you need have no apprehension—whenever the Back is soil'd, it may be clean'd with a wet Cloth, without any detriment if it touches not the Gilding—nothing whatever can hurt the Drawing which is not destructive to the vellum. . . . We are sorry the Charge of binding the 2 last Books sh'd have exceeded what you might apprehend—it is our Ambition to give Satisfaction in every Thing, and when the Price cannot be specify'd beforehand we aim at a proportionate charge. . . ." Signed "J. Edwards."

In telling his customer that a damp cloth will not hurt the drawings on the back and covers, Edwards does not explain why they are immune from damage. This suggests that his method of drawing under the vellum was, at the time, a secret.

Bull and Walpole were close friends, the former having been interested in Walpole's hobby, the Strawberry Hill Press. He collected a large number of books and other productions of the Press, but he evidently treasured this volume rather more highly than the rest, having commissioned Edwards to bind the book and decorate the back and fore-edge with views of Strawberry Hill.
